Our contributors to this issue of IJSS [26(1), 2026] have provided thought-provoking evidences of useful applications of statistical methods in diverse areas such as malnutrition, depression, mental health, physical health and environment. Also there are contributions dealing with classical theoretical issues.

On the whole, we offer to our readers a collection of entertaining studies in the broad areas of statistical theory and applications.

We offer thanks to our contributors and reviewers for a constructive interplay which hopefully has resulted in acceptance by the readers at large.
